Sign.: F 19534 [MARKO, Vladislav (100%)] The author of this scientific work deals with the application of the provisions of § 427 to 431 of the Civil Code Act governing the liability for damage caused by the operation of means of transport. It defines and characterizes concepts such as operator, carrier, motor vehicle driver, driver, etc. in relation to this type of responsibility. It also deals with the claims for compensation paid by an insurance company for damage caused by the operation of a motor vehicle in compliance with the relevant provisions of Act no. 381/2001 Coll. on compulsory contractual insurance for liability for damage caused by the operation of a motor vehicle. According to the criteria of the Scientific Council of the Academy of the Police Force in Bratislava, this constitutes a scientific output (a chapter in a foreign monograph) of objective significance in several states, not limited to the same region; for this reason, the author has classified this output in Category A+.

Within the constraints of the paper's scope, particular attention is devoted to the commission of an intentional criminal offence against the testator, his or her spouse, children, or parents, as well as to the conviction of a descendant for an intentional criminal offence resulting in a custodial sentence of at least one year. These issues are examined in a comprehensive manner, with emphasis placed on the mutual interrelationship between the legal institutes of unworthiness to inherit and disinheritance. Specific questions concerning legally reprehensible conduct on the part of an heir, which results in disqualification from succession, as well as the legal possibility for a testator to disinherit his or her descendant, are further specified with reference to relevant case law and from the perspective of ethical considerations. According to the criteria of the Scientific Council of the Academy of the Police Force in Bratislava governing the classification of research outputs, the contribution constitutes a published scientific paper presented at an international scientific conference and is of objective relevance for the development of the respective field of scholarly activity in an international context. The relevance of the question of the quality of current lawmaking is
